

Midway
Summer 1859 — a few pioneers began to settle along Snake
Creek <sup>in the north</sup> west side of Provo River
Valley: Jesse McCarroll

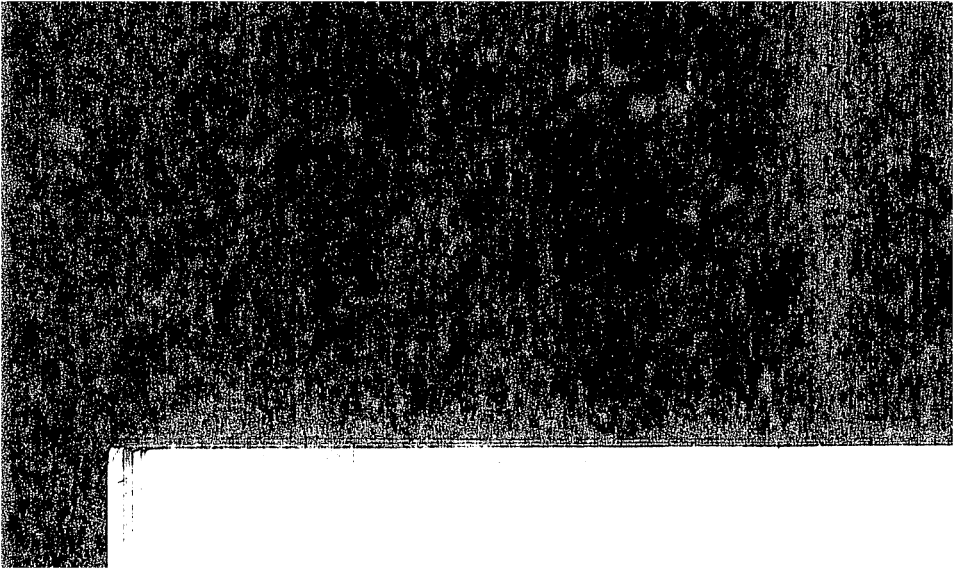

Benjamin Mark Smith

Sidney Hymen Epperson

They started bldg log cabins along the Snake Creek

A crop of grain was planted by McCarroll,
Smith, Epperson, David Reed, Jeremiah

Ref. HBAH p 541-2 | Kobey & Edwin Bronson.

Deer Creek Project Hits Snag —
The building of the Deer Creek Reservoir would, we were told a few months ago would be in course of construction by or before early spring, does not now seem to be so well assured. Those who are most directly concerned in this project were informed that those who were to use the water, especially as irrigation companies, must give security for the repayment of the money to be borrowed from the government, and the last report we have seen relative to this matter, indicated that about 22 percent of those concerned had signed up.

Feb. 9, 1934

It now appears that if Utah wants the Deer Creek Reservoir built, involving the expenditure of $10,000,000, it is quite generally agreed that a metropolitan water district will have to be organized.

However, spring is at hand. More than two million dollars has been released by the federal board of public works at Washington for a start on the project as soon as terms are met agreeably.

Death

[ ] date of death
[ ] place of death
[ ] date of birth
[ ] occupation

REFUND CHECKS MUST BE CASHED I

jm